

Wishing You a World of Peace

2 0 0 6

Thank You for a Great Year!

The holiday season is a good time to review some of the highlights of 2006. As members of Team CACI, you helped us make this an outstanding year.

In the contracts arena, CACI set a record, reaching more than $2 billion in contract awards for the first time in our history.

We won several of the large, complex awards we need to keep moving up to the Tier 1 level of federal support. These included the $36 billion-ceiling U.S. Army FIRST contract, as well as the $19.25 billion-ceiling S3 and $450 million-ceiling ETOSS Army awards, the latter a key recompet.

We also recompeted and won a $96 million contract to support special communications for the U.S. Navy, and took away a large and important classified contract from a major industry competitor.

We completed three acquisitions this year that strengthened our operations and provide a solid foundation for the future. Your support for these efforts eased the transition for all your new teammates.

This also is a good time to remember the basic principles of our CACI culture, which have enabled our success.

At CACI, the client is Number One. Everyone in our industry knows it ... there simply isn't another company that has the customer dedication we bring to all our projects.

This focus includes our relentless determination to win 100% of our recompetes. Maintaining this business base is essential to our growth and success.

And at CACI, we always do the right thing, for our clients and for each other. We practice continuous quality control, strictly follow company policy, take responsibility for our actions — and act with honesty and integrity in all we do.

At CACI, we strive always to maintain a value-oriented culture, where people enjoy working. We work hard to retain our outstanding employees — and to recruit many more like them! We are also grateful to the many CACI employees who have helped make our Employee Referral Program a recruiting success.

Of course, we also remember the contributions and sacrifices our servicemen and women make each day in distant battlefields, fighting to protect the freedoms we hold so dear. We support them and wish them peace and a safe return to their waiting families.

We thank you all for the outstanding and important work you have done this past year. Your dedication and excellence enables us to approach 2007 with optimism, vision, and confidence in our ability to accomplish great things in the days ahead ... for ourselves, our company, and our country.

Jack London

Paul Cofoni

Saluting Our Top Performers

CACI Leaders Deliver Accolades and Inspiration

By Michael Pino

CACI's second quarter FY07 awards banquet — our Spirit of Distinction and Excellence Awards Celebration — was held on December 12, 2006, at the headquarters of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) at Constitution Hall in Washington, D.C.

CACI's Chairman, President, and CEO Dr. J.P. (Jack) London, President of U.S. Operations Paul Cofoni, and Chief Operations Officer Bill Fairl presided over the event, welcoming our winners and joining them in the historic DAR library and museum.

Dr. London enthusiastically greeted the new winners as “outstanding men and women who have contributed so much to our company's success.”

He went on to note that the DAR location was a special one for him and for CACI, explaining that “for more than one hundred years, the DAR has linked present-day Americans to their proud past.” Dr. London also added that his own family has been deeply involved in the DAR, and noted that a book on the London family genealogy could be found in the DAR library.

Dr. London enthusiastically welcomed our award winners.

ALL AWARDS PHOTOS BY STAN POCCATEK

Paul Cofoni gave the keynote speech. In it, he supplied additional background on the DAR and why it was chosen for the evening's celebration.

In his address, Paul recounted an inspiring story from the DAR's American Spirit magazine. “It's about an extraordinary woman whose three daughters have each committed to careers in the U.S. Army,” he said.

Pointing out that all four were DAR members, all doing their part to defend their beliefs and values, Paul addressed the crowd in simple yet compelling language: “Now that, ladies and gentlemen, is what the DAR is all about — an abiding love of country, a steadfast commitment to America's ideals, and a tireless dedication to protect and serve our nation and what it stands for.

“And that is also what CACI is all about — what you are all about ... the initiative, vision, and vigilance that brought you here ... and the remarkable spirit of distinction and excellence that sets you apart and makes you shine.”

Paul Cofoni delivered the keynote speech, noting how the DAR's achievements reflect CACI's own accomplishments.

Managers' Trifecta

Recognizing Three Who Nurture and Nominate

By Michael Pino

At CACI, we celebrate the accomplishments of all our award winners, but always remember the nominating managers who take the time to recognize and nominate their talented performers.

This quarter's Spirit of Distinction and Excellence Awards celebration saw a three-way tie for top nominating manager honors, with Bob Blanc of our Chantilly, Va. location, Paul Masters of Fairfax, Va., and Mark Robertson of the Eatontown, NJ office sharing the honors.

"I was happy to have the opportunity to nominate Mike McCarthy, Marisa Aiello McCarthy, and Peter Scucces," says Mark. "They made solid contributions for our important U.S. Army contract wins."

Paul points out that one of the most satisfying parts of his job is "nominating high-quality team members, people like Susan Caldron, Tom Eudaley, and Doug Waltz. Our entire management team continues to highlight CACI's Recognition and Incentive program to further recognize the successful efforts of our team."

Adds Bob, "You can't win the best programs without the best teams." Of his award winners, Bob says, "Hank Rausch was his innovative best ... Paul Rodriguez brought his security expertise to the table ... and Bill McGinnis superbly managed an extraordinary two-year capture and proposal effort."

Employee Communications can help CACI managers develop award nominations. Contact Director Sandy Snyder at (703) 841-7908, ssnyder@caci.com.

CACI managers Mark Robertson, Paul Masters, and Bob Blanc were honored for making the most successful award nominations this quarter.

Bill Fairl reprised his role as master of ceremonies, introducing all our award winners.

Following Paul's speech was Bill Fairl, the night's master of ceremonies, who admits, "This is my favorite part of the evening — when we recognize our top performers."

Bill introduced our top nominating managers, "those people who recognized talent, nurtured it, and rewarded it," and then called each award winner to come forward and personally receive his or her award from Dr. London.

All told, it was another memorable celebration of the people and achievements that drive our success.

Turn to the center spread to see some of our award winners. For photos and quotes from on all our winners, visit the Recognition and Incentive section on CACI.net.

The Spirit of Distinction & Excellence

CACI's second quarter FY07 awards celebration was held on December 12, 2006 at the historic headquarters of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington, D.C. Here is just a sampling of some of the top performers celebrated that evening.

For more information on all our awards, visit the Rewards section of CACI.net at <http://hq.caci.com/awards/reward.shtml>, or contact Employee Communications Director Sandy Snyder at (703) 841-7908, ssnyder@caci.com.

The DAR headquarters provided a memorable and fitting venue for the celebration of our CACI award winners.

CACI guests enjoyed a cordial reception in the historic DAR library.

Taking a moment to smile for the camera are Technical Eagle Chad Schroeder, Nance Renegar, Scot Renegar of the Field Services Information Technology Division Master's Division team, and Sara Schroeder.

Project Plus winner
Laura Lechler with John Lechler.

Executive VP Eric
Whittleton joins Jasmine Colon and Team Eagle leader
Leander Knox.

A Wing gathering: Wing Award winner Ken Logerwell and Molli Logerwell (l) along with Wing Awardee Chris Ronsisvalle and Steven Ronsisvalle.

Dr. London presents the Major Contract Award Trophy to Pinnacle Award recipients Bob Blanc (l) and Bill McGinnis (r).

Project Plus winner Tom Eudaley on the receiving line with Paul Cofoni, Bill Fairl, and Dr. London.

Dr. London with Wing Award winner Marisa McCarthy.

What We've Known for Years

Ted Buford Recognized With GSA Lifetime Achievement Award

By Keith Gamboa

Team CACI had a proud moment when Ted Buford received the U.S. General Services Administration (GSA) Lifetime Achievement award in November at the Excellence in Partnership awards ceremony held at the Ritz-Carlton in Arlington, Virginia.

The recipient of the Lifetime Achievement Award is an individual in the contractor community who has dedicated substantial time working with GSA and industry to make the GSA multiple-award contract schedules program the success it is today.

At CACI, Ted also has an outstanding record of business success. He is Senior VP in charge of our Program Management Office for GSA contracts. Thanks to Ted and staff, more than a billion dollars in funded orders have been awarded to CACI through GSA contracts since our first GSA award in 1997.

The main sponsors for the 2006 awards included the Coalition for Government Procurement and Federal Times, along with participation from GSA's Federal Supply Service.

PHOTO COURTESY TED BUFORD

Ted Buford's Lifetime Achievement Award is one of the highest accomplishments a contractor can attain in serving GSA and the federal government ... and just confirms the outstanding performance we've come to expect from Ted all along.

"I was honored and humbled to accept the award," says Ted. "We're very proud of CACI's record in GSA sales and service, and our strong relationship with the coalition and other associations out there. I think we've made a significant contribution."

This latest recognition from the GSA adds to a list of kudos for Ted that includes membership in CACI's Aces Club in 1998, and receiving the Wing Award in 2001 and the Pinnacle Award in 2002.

As Larry King, CACI Executive VP and Chief of Staff notes, "It was very pleasing that Ted's passion and hard work were acknowledged by his associates in industry and government. They have recognized publicly what we at CACI have known for years!"

Send your congratulations to Ted at (703) 679-4177, tbuford@caci.com.

For more detailed versions of these three articles, visit CACI.net.

Raising Funds — and Supporting the Future

Paul Patton Honored for Service to Ohio's Central State University

By Michael Pino

CACI Senior VP Paul Patton is an expert in the business solutions his group provides to the U.S. Army, Air Force, and other customers. But he also knows his way around fundraisers — and helped Ohio's Central State University (CSU) raise nearly eight times as much money last year as it did when Paul got involved just four years ago.

Paul sits on the university's Business Advisory Council, and as a council member knows better than most how much small schools like CSU must rely on grants and fundraising to get by. When he attended his first fundraiser, "I saw right away there was room to do more," he says.

That event, a golf tournament that served as the main fundraiser for the school, brought in $8,000. But Paul noticed there were no programs to mark the occasion ... or to provide a way for advertisers and non-golfers to support the school. A recommendation from Paul started the ball rolling, and a souvenir journal has been produced for the fundraiser every year since. Thanks to Paul, the last CSU event took in more than $60,000.

Symbols of Hope

Marine Corps Reservist Presents Iraqi Ballots to Dr. London

By Keith Gamboa

It was a historic occasion, when courage and democracy triumphed over the forces of terror.

In December 2005, tens of thousands of Iraqi citizens braved the threat of marauding insurgents and went to neighborhood polling places to vote for their candidates in the Iraqi National Assembly. Their ballots were symbols of hope that their nation had a future free from tyranny.

Helping to make this possible were thousands of allied Coalition Force troops, who assisted the Iraqis in safeguarding voters participating in the elections. Among these warfighters was Major Dan Wagner, a team commander with the 7th Marine Regiment, assigned to Anbar Province ... and a CACI employee and Marine Corps reservist, called up to serve his country.

From mid-2005 until March of 2006, Dan served as military liaison to the Iraqi government. Now back as a civilian CACI employee, he is with our team supporting the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense.

On Monday, December 4, Dan proudly presented unused ballots from the general election in December and the constitutional referendum held in October to Dr. J.P. (Jack) London, CACI Chairman of the Board, President, and CEO.

For Dan, the ballots have a special significance. "To see the actual ballots that the people used to vote for their own government is historical, critically important, and an affirmation of everything that CACI stands for as it helps our nation accomplish its missions."

Receiving the ballots, Dr. London remarked, "These mean a lot to me personally and to all of us at CACI. It's people like Dan, and the work they do here and when they're called upon to serve our country, that make CACI such a unique and special company."

PHOTO BY STAN POZATEK

U.S. Marine Corps reservist and CACI employee Dan Wagner presents Dr. Jack London with ballots used during Iraqi elections.

"A lot of men and women sacrificed to give the Iraqis the opportunity to vote," Dan adds. We can never take that for granted."

Dan's achievements have also earned him our CACI Ethos Award for employees who exemplify the CACI character and spirit. Send your "ooh-rah!" to Dan at dawagner@caci.com.

CACI President of U.S. Operations Paul Cofoni congratulates Paul Patton on his letter of commendation from Central State University in Ohio. The letter was presented to Paul at a ceremony in his honor with CACI's top management team.

PHOTO BY STAN POZATEK

Now the Dean of CSU's College of Business & Industry, Dr. Charles Showell, has written to CACI to thank Paul for his efforts. The commendation was presented by Executive VP Gil Guarino along with CACI Chairman Dr. Jack London and senior executives in a ceremony for Paul on December 11.

"I'm proud to assist CSU in providing a high-quality education for our young people," Paul says. "CSU and CACI really both share the same goals ... supporting America's future."

You can congratulate Paul at (703) 679-3336, ppatton@caci.com.

Happy Holidays!

CACI people across the company helped bring good cheer to the holiday season. Thanks to all for their outstanding support.

PHOTO BY CAROLYN HINKLE

In Austin, Texas, Lynn Tinney, Linda Reams, and Constance Rehage were this year's coordinators of the office's Angel Tree support. In this effort, some 20 employees contributed to the gifts and clothes for three siblings aged 8, 6, and 18 months.

PHOTO BY NICK CHRISTOFF

In Colonial Heights, Va., the local Jaycees teamed with CACI to send boxes of holiday gifts to our U.S. Marines in Iraq. Shown here are Jaycees VP Ellen Kile and CACI Program Manager Jim Myers. Thanks also go to Sherri Okum (not shown) for her key role.

PHOTO BY JENNIFER ZHU

At our Ballston, Va. headquarters, cheering on the holidays with more than 150 Angel Tree gifts for needy kids were Gloria Graham-Banks, Evy Garcia, Anita Terry, Taimeka Butler, Carolyn Wilson, Jody Jackson, and Cynthia Payne.

Angel Tree bikes, toys, and more were collected at our Park Meadows 2 facility in Chantilly, Va.

PHOTO BY DEBBIE BOWERS

You can see more holiday photos on CACI.net.

PHOTO BY GEORGE KANALY

Members of our Norfolk, Va. office Angel Tree team included, at left: Napoleon Clay, Grover Montgomery, Pete Overman, Patricia Faison, Fred-die Braza, Linda Knight, Dawn Eanes, and Trisha Schryer; at right: Clyde Hoover, Robert Ewell, Dominique Fabien, Pete Watters, Marlene O'Rosco, Stephanie Ramos, Christina Hoggard, and Alice Quartararo.