

FY05 Earnings: Solid Growth, Record Success

CACI Announces $1.62 Billion in Revenue for Fiscal Year 2005

Dear Team,

Congratulations Team CACI on the best year-end and fourth quarter profits and revenue in our company's history!

On August 18, we announced the earnings results for fiscal year 2005, which ended June 30. Our numbers were outstanding, and our $1.62 billion in revenue was another one for the record books.

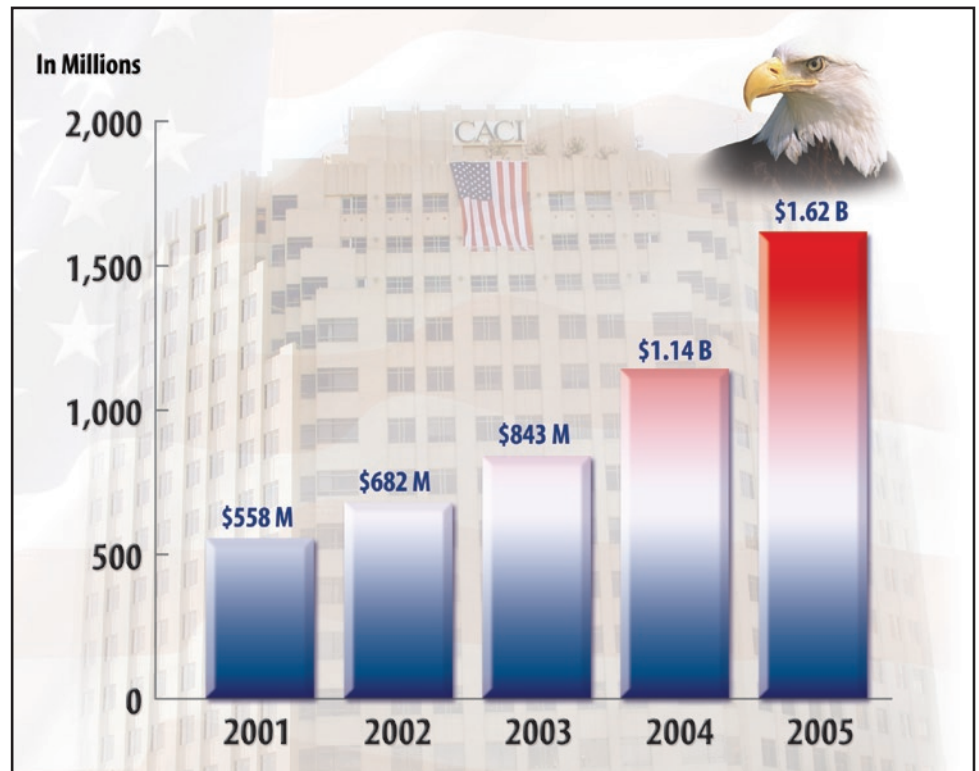

Let's take a moment to think about the exceptional growth CACI has achieved over the past few years.

Since 2003 our revenue has almost doubled, and since 2001 it's nearly tripled. That's an exciting record of growth and success that few others can match.

Just look at the figures. Our $1.62 billion revenue represents an increase of 42 percent over fiscal 2004. We also reported an operating income increase of 44 percent. Our total contract awards for the year were a whopping $1.2+ billion. We provided high-quality support for our clients, superb opportunities for our people, and high returns for our shareholders.

We owe this success to all the fine people of CACI. You carried on the CACI culture of quality client service and best value, with honesty and integrity in all we do. You helped clients on historic missions to protect our nation and defend freedom around the globe.

Within CACI, you welcomed new teammates and mentored new hires.

Fiscal 2005 was another record-setting year for CACI. We are a solid and stable high performer, a continuously growing company whose annual revenue has almost doubled in the last two years, and nearly tripled since 2001.

You committed yourselves to our successful Alignment for Growth, and continued to collaborate to win.

CACI's top financial performance is a real tribute to our people, our strategies, and our culture of success — and provides a great foundation going forward. Remember that we want to become a Tier 1 company, with $3 billion in revenue, by fiscal 2009. I know we can get there — with your support.

On behalf of everyone on CACI's Board of Directors and top management team,

I offer a hearty thanks and congratulations to each and every one of you. I commend you for your service, your dedication, and your ever vigilant commitment to our company's success!

Jack London

FY05 Highlights

Some of the Notable Events That Shaped Our Financial Performance

By Michael Pino

CACI's financial performance in fiscal year 2005 was exceptional by every measure. Here are some of the highlights that produced our record-setting results.

- We won approximately $1.2 billion in contract awards:

- Over $300 million in national security and intelligence work
- $126 million to support the Navy Enterprise Maintenance Automated Information System (NEMAIS)
- $85 million to support the Navy's Fleet Assistance and Shipboard Training (FAST) program
- $75 million to support information systems for Navy shipyards
- More than $300 million in potential revenue on new contract vehicles with the Naval Air Systems Command and General Services Administration

- We received outstanding media recognition:

- Washington Technology places us 17th among the top 100 federal prime contractors
- Business 2.0 magazine places us 30th among the 100 fastest growing technology companies in America

- Our stock performance was strong:

- The Wall Street Journal rates us No. 1 in the Computer Services Industry for five-year and 10-year average returns to shareholders
- We were added to the Russell 1000 index of "large cap" companies — those with the largest market capitalization, a measure of financial performance and investment value

- We successfully completed our integration of the Defense and Intelligence Group:

- Added 1,650 new employees
- Increased business with more than $250 million in contracts
- Complemented our outstanding record of client support

- We successfully initiated our new Alignment for Growth:

- Four new business groups
- Increased client focus
- Stronger company collaboration
- Enhanced career opportunities for all CACI people

- We are well positioned for future growth:

- Completed FY05 with approximately $2 billion in submitted proposals under evaluation
- We are also currently pursuing more than 30 Tier 1 deals: contracts greater than $100 million

Commended by the Senate

Iraq Employee George Anthony Acknowledged by U.S. Senate Homeland Security Committee

By Kate Poindexter

Long hours, separation from family, and sandstorms are among the elements that George Anthony endures every day in Iraq. But he's not complaining — and neither is the U.S. government. In fact, the Senate Homeland Security Committee's Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations is praising him for the work he is doing.

On a recent trip to Iraq, subcommittee staff enlisted George's aid as they conducted inquiries into the United Nations Oil for Food Program.

George provided valuable background information to the staff on the former Iraqi regime and outlined cultural sensitivities in the area. He also helped write critical reports. The subcommittee was so pleased with his work that they wrote a letter to Dr. London highlighting George's positive role in its investigation.

George says it's all in a day's work. While he's proud of his service to the company and the country, he gives most of the credit to his family. "If what I am doing helps the process of rebuilding this country, then I am proud to be here," he explains. "I have to give thanks to my family for the sacrifices they are making and the challenges my wife is dealing with while I am here. I could not be here without their support."

As for the recognition he has received from the Senate, George says, "It is always nice to receive praise from someone, but the real reward comes from doing a job well done."

Quality Distinction

Vivian Hollifield Earns Prestigious Auditor Certification

By Tom McKillop

Vivian Hollifield is helping her team provide technical distinction that keeps clients happy and wins new business.

Independent certification of quality and project management is becoming a key requirement for many IT companies. That's why it was good news to hear that Vivian Hollifield, a quality assurance manager in our Enterprise Technologies and Services (ETS) group, has been named a Certified Quality Auditor by the American Society for Quality (ASQ).

Vivian, who works in ETS's Configuration and Logistics Support Programs Division in Chantilly, Va., is the latest of just a handful of CACI employees with this professional recognition. Her achievement brings distinction to her team and value to CACI's technical reputation.

According to Vivian, the certification took about 200 hours of study. "I did it because I felt it was important to CACI and our client," she explains. "It shows that CACI is going the extra mile to meet quality standards on client projects, and it gives us a great competitive edge on future bids." Vivian also led her division's initiative to achieve formal ISO 9001 quality management certification, which was achieved in June.

"Vivian's efforts have been nothing less than spectacular," says Division Manager Tom McKillop. Ray Morales, a quality assurance expert in our Project Resources Group, adds that "an ASQ certification is the gold standard in the quality engineering field."

Introducing CACI Project Philanthropy

Focusing Company Support on Education and the Preservation of National Treasures

by Sandy Snyder

On August 22, CACI announced an initiative to enhance our role as a good corporate citizen: CACI Project Philanthropy.

The new program continues our tradition of charitable corporate support, with a special focus on two areas that best reflect CACI's unique culture and business: the support of education-related programs and the preservation of national treasures.

Within these broad areas, CACI people have significant flexibility to choose worthy causes for corporate support. We know that CACI people, as individuals, support many charities across the country, and we think that CACI, as a company, can best complement these efforts with a focus on education and national treasures.

They are areas in which all of us can contribute, and there is considerable latitude in identifying organizations and activities that meet program guidelines.

Business Communications is taking the lead role in implementing the program. The group will facilitate requests, coordinate activities, and work with CACI employees who can volunteer their support.

And we do need helping hands to research contribution possibilities and support related activities that require small investments of time. CACI Cares and CACI in Motion will also be vital components of Project Philanthropy, as they continue to be valuable and popular programs for charitable support.

For more information, be sure to visit the CACI Project Philanthropy site on CACI.net. Also stay tuned to Lotus Notes for email updates on the program and its activities.

We welcome ideas and recommendations that are aligned with our program's specific focus. Once a recommendation has been approved, funds will be provided to the relevant Business Group or staff organization to support the approved charitable activity.

We encourage everyone to help make CACI Project Philanthropy a rich and vibrant success for our nation's children and their educational opportunities, as well as for the preservation of our national heritage.

For more information, and to submit recommendations for charitable support, please email philanthropy@caci.com.
